"Shall Women Preach" Video Project

The Need

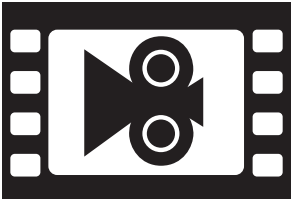

"A picture is worth a thousand words." While this old adage is true, it is nice to have words sometimes. The "Shall Women Preach" Video Project will help to put words and pictures together as we seek to capture the stories of many CP clergywomen.

This important and unique project will explore the history of women's ordination as ministers of Word and Sacrament. In addition, it will capture the stories of several women who paved the road for women's ordination and leadership in the church as well as those who continue to offer leadership. There is a great sense of urgency to save their stories for future generations in the CP Church. From their stories, women and men will gather encouragement, hope and determination. Their stories will educate and inform future generations as we look at the ever-evolving role of clergywomen in the church.

Plans also include hearing the stories of some other significant clergywomen - we will hear the Native American and African American voices. We will listen to Hispanic and Asian voices. We will hear the voice of the first clergywoman to serve as Moderator of General Assembly. And lastly, we will hear the hopes and dreams of several women candidates as they continue to discern God's call in their lives and receive training for that call to serve.

"Shall Women Preach" Video Project is an exciting adventure, and we invite you to come along for the journey as you contribute financially to the effort.
